Winner: J&G

Waste disposal company J&G is the winner of the Environmental Non-Print Supplier of the Year award due to its dedication to improving waste management within the print industry.

The aim of J&G is to persuade the printing industry that waste is not just a nuisance to be discarded at will, but a source of valuable reusable raw materials.

For this, J&G operates a waste management service, offering collection, treatment, disposal and recycling services to over 2,000 accounts, including many leading UK print companies, who between them produce around 150 different waste streams.

J&G has invested heavily in many areas of its waste management supply chain, including in-plant, infrastructure, transport fleet and staff training.

The service J&G provides to handle this has become a key part of its clients' supply chain, using J&G's expertise to ensure they comply with legislation, as well as general waste management advice.

J&G also practices what it preaches, with its own environmental management system and ISO 14001 certification, and by ensuring that its business practices link into sustainable development.

Judges' comments

This company has done so much to improve the standards of waste management in the print industry, and its own internal performance is great as well.
